

Your Group's History

Any Group's history can uncover facts and recollections that will strengthen its foundation, when viewed in the context of experience and local A.A. history. The facts can be relevant, humorous, eye-opening, and significant to a number of places: 1) to your Group itself 2) to your District Archives 3) to your Area Archives, and 4) to our Archives at GSO. Assembling a group history is easier than what a regular AA home group member might think it would take to complete. Most of all, take your time and enjoy putting it together.

As a GSR or home group member, you can collect the facts---your group treasurer, longtime members, or secretary (not too many groups have one anymore) can participate in the research. Setting up a roundtable meeting to answer the eighteen questions in this archives project has good possibilities for success, and does not need to be completed in one session.

These histories will add to the many items that preserve the facts, the experience, and the vital history that might otherwise become lost and get replaced by myths and half-truths.

The subjects of this history survey are about "where" your Group meets, "how" your meeting structure developed, "who" are the core members who gave direction to your current Group life, and "what" your group does today, when included with the earliest recollections you can find.
